A different ending for Romeo and Juliet

Ana Manvelishvili

Juliet wakes up and sees Romeo looking at the poison that could have killed him. Romeo turns and sees Juliet, who is alive. He hugs her and says, “Oh, Juliet! I was so lonely without you. I thought you were gone. You scared me.”

The guards were standing outside the room. When they heard the noise, they immediately entered the room and stood in shock. They saw that Juliet was standing up and she was alive. They immediately called the family but Romeo had everything planned and before they came to their senses, the lovers had fled.

Romeo and Juliet went to another country far from everyone. They had a big house and a beautiful garden. They started their own family. They had two children, Lily and Tom, and they lived happily ever after.
