Milton Society of Africa

Here is a message from our friends at the Milton Society of Africa:

Thanks for your updates on Milton Society of Georgia's literary events and activities. We are very grateful.

For close to two months now, we have started holding our monthly meetings. The letter you gave us was of immense importance to our platform. We are currently building membership, and members who are creative writers are showing interest.

We also got some materials online which we have been using to educate our new members and the general public on the personality of our Role Model, John Milton.

In a bid to move forward and get more writers to join us. We have inaugurated the John Milton Prize for Poetry (strictly for African Poets and Writers) which is divided into three prizes. First Prize, Second Prize and Third Prize. The John Milton Prize for Poetry is going to be an annual prize for Milton Lovers and Writers of poetry across Africa. We are currently looking for sponsors for this prize. We shall be glad if Milton Society of Georgia can sponsor/endow a prize for this laudable project. No amount is too small. Milton Society of Africa is not going to hold any money; any winning poet will be directed to claim their prize from you. And if you want us to award them directly, there won't be any problem. Once you give us your go ahead for your endowment/sponsorship. We shall come up with the call for entries and send it to you for approval. Winning entries from the competition will be electronically published on your website.
